

WEBB INSTITUTE

Writing Coach

Webb Institute, a four-year engineering college in Glen Cove, seeks a writing coach to help students on an individual basis with both technical and non-technical report and essay writing. The writing lab, which will supplement required courses, will meet four hours a week, with availability preferably from 6 to 8 p.m. on two evenings, beginning in August 2017. This position does not involve merely editing student writing; rather, it would center on helping students to improve style and grammatical correctness in their work.

The preference is for candidates who have completed a master's degree in Composition/Rhetoric or in English though candidates who have completed significant work toward a master's degree will be considered.

Candidates should submit a C.V. to Dr. Richard Harris, Assistant Dean, at rharris@webb.edu.

Webb Institute is an equal opportunity employer. Employment is contingent upon successful completion of a background check (Criminal, Education, and Employment Verification).
